

FOOTBALL

BALLYMENA REPRESENTED AT SUBBUTEO WORLD CUP

SIX players from Northern Ireland - including a Ballymena representative - will be heading to the Subbuteo World Cup later this month.

It will be held in Tunbridge Wells, Kent, England, where the game was invented in 1946 and where teams and accessories were manufactured for many years. There will also be various events around the famous town to celebrate the table-top game which still survives among today's modern computer games.

In Northern Ireland, Subbuteo was at its height of popularity in the 1970s and 1980s, when most football-loving boys would have owned a set. Some of those players kept the game going and formed the Northern Ireland Table Football Association in 2002, which has been organising events in the Province ever since.

The current Northern Ireland squad consists of Kenny Beggs from Ballymena, Eoin Adams from Bangor, Ian Greer from Cookstown, Craig Stewart from Belfast and Martinog Bradley and Lawrence Watson from Derry/Londonderry. Most have previous World Cup and International experience in places such as Rome, Belgium and Germany, which they will need to draw on to compete against the World's top players. Win, lose or draw, they aim to do the country proud and have fun in the process.

The table soccer action takes place from 20th-22nd September with 32 countries taking part and there will be live feed on the internet.

Further information and links can be found on Northern Ireland Table Football Association website www.nitfa.org.uk.

Craig Stewart, Belfast.

From left, Martinog Bradley, Londonderry; Kenny Beggs, Ballymena and Lawrence Watson, Londonderry.

Cookstown's Ian Greer, left and Eoin Adams, from Bangor.

Northern Ireland in action against Australia at the 2022 World Cup in Rome